

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A functional block for verifying correct interface operation of any functional block is generated from interface description and installed on a LSI chip. To accomplish this, from the interface description, hardware description of a synthesizable interface checker is generated. Means for selecting interface functions to be checked is provided, thereby making it possible to reduce the overhead of circuits to be installed on the LSI.